

Im a flight attendant and I believe this is not a good idea. As it is we have problems with people using cell phones now and not turning them off when we ask them to. Also I would hate to subject a passenger to sit next to someone talking on their cellphone the whole flight. The airplane is small enough as it is this would make it feel even smaller for some people bringing on anxiety and possibly some confrontations with passengers. As it is now some passengers do not listen to crew instructions and talk over announcements being made. I think we should leave things the way they are if they want to use their cellphone in air maybe they should get on a private plane. Thank you.
